GPO LAUNCHES GOVINFO

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Government Publishing Office (GPO) launches www.govinfo.gov and ushers in a new, dynamic way for the public to discover and access Government information on the three branches of the Federal Government. govinfo is a user-friendly, modernized site that provides an easy to use navigation system accessible on smartphones, tablets, laptops and personal computers. GPO receives information from Federal agencies and organizations in all three branches of the Government. Its content feeds The Library of Congress' www.congress.gov and the Federal Register site. Currently in beta, govinfo will replace GPO's Federal Digital System (FDsys) in 2017.

"GPO has been a leader in adapting to the way the public receives Government information. Our employees were the first to provide digital access to this treasure trove of information in 1994. Today, GPO gives the public the next generation of this robust system. govinfo does what no other Government site can do—provide the public with a one-stop site to authentic, published Government information," said GPO Director Davita Vance-Cooks.

There are more than 1.5 million titles available on govinfo, with more added daily. Collections on govinfo include:

- The Congressional Record
- Federal Register
- Congressional Calendars, Hearings, Reports
- Bills
- The U.S. Code
- Code of Federal Regulations
- U.S. Courts Opinions
- The Federal Budget

Some key features on govinfo:

- Mobile-friendly optimized for screen size
- An ABC list of collections
- Quick Links to popular publications
- Related Documents
- Search by Calendar
- Shareable social media content

GPO is the Federal Government's official, digital, secure resource for producing, procuring, cataloging, indexing, authenticating, disseminating, and preserving the official information products of the U.S. Government.
